The 33rd Cambridge International Symposium on Economic Crime

The Limits of the Law – the role of compliance in the 21st Century

This year the Cambridge International Symposium on Economic Crime will celebrate its thirty-third year. It is a testament to the Symposium’s unique blend of relevance, practicality and topicality that over the years it has enjoyed the support of so many institutions and experts from around the world. It also attests to the deep concern of governments, financial and other institutions and their professional advisers as to the extent of the risks to stability and security thrown up by economic crime and misconduct, and in particular organised crime. The annual Cambridge Symposium is a truly unique event, which, over the years, has made an unrivalled contribution to understanding the real issues involved in preventing and controlling economically motivated serious crime. As a uniquely respected and trusted international forum and network it has also made an impressive and meaningful contribution to fostering international co-operation and promoting mutual understanding and goodwill.

The Thirty-third symposium has as its overarching theme the vital role that compliance plays in promoting integrity and reinforcing the law. In recent years we have increasingly placed those institutions and their advisers who mind other people’s wealth in the vanguard in reducing exposure to the risks presented by economic crime and subversion. The obligations that are placed on those who operate in the ordinary course of their business and profession in the financial sector are significant and the consequences of failing in the discharge of their compliance duties severe. The benefits to society by transferring legal and regulatory risk in this manner on to those who mind other people’s wealth, as the agencies adopt disruptive strategies rather than those of the traditional criminal justice system, are sometimes less obvious. Getting the balance right in sharing the responsibility to protect our institutions, economies and ourselves is neither easy nor uncontroversial. Banks and other institutions devote vast resources to compliance and yet repeatedly they are sanctioned for not doing enough. Notwithstanding the serious regulatory, legal and financial consequences of all this, little considered thought has been given to the issues left alone to the future. The Symposium seeks to address this deficit in a practical and informed manner in its plenary sessions, numerous specialist workshops and think tanks.

While the primary focus of this year’s symposium is on the risks related to compliance, as in previous years the programme includes a host of other issues, some more related to the theme than others, which are of pressing concern to those seeking to protect the integrity and stability of financial and business institutions and the wider economy. In particular this year we will be focussing on strategies that are being developed within law enforcement and the regulators to target key facilitators and the choke points in the flow of crime related wealth. Relevant to, but also beyond this, will be the concern to improve the effectiveness of anti-corruption laws particularly in regard to the financial sector and law enforcement itself. We will also give considerable emphasis to the sharing of information between the public and private sectors both domestically and internationally. The programme provides a unique opportunity, at a very practical level, to share the experiences of over 360 specialist speakers and panellists in the prevention and control of risk to the integrity and stability of the financial system and those who operate within it.

The Symposium brings together in one of the oldest medieval Colleges within the University of Cambridge, ministers, legislators, senior officials, diplomats, judges, regulators, law enforcement, intelligence and security officers, financial intermediaries, bankers, professional advisers, compliance and risk officers and scholars from around the world. Last year the symposium attracted well over 1,600 participants from over 100 countries.

The programme is structured to provide a depth and breadth of opportunity - second to none, for those participating in the programme to become aware not only of existing, but also new threats, and how best to address them. Through the numerous plenary and other workshops and in particular the considerable opportunities to meet colleagues socially, there is a degree of interaction and collaboration that could only be encountered in an institution that has the highest world reputation for learning and research. The University of Cambridge, collaborating with a host of distinguished institutions throughout the world, offers a wholly different experience in addressing these fundamentally important issues.

The Cambridge Symposium is not and has never been just a conference. It is organised on a non-profit making basis by some of the world’s most respected academic and research institutions with the active involvement and support of numerous governmental and inter-governmental organisations. It was established to promote meaningful international co-operation – in the fight against financial crime. Its record is its best testimonial. Successful symposia have made a real contribution – at all levels, to promoting stability, good governance and the disruption and control of serious crime and terror. Those who are concerned to protect and promote the integrity and wellbeing of their national economy, institution or enterprise – or who are concerned to better understand the risks facing business today, cannot afford to miss this very special event.

Participation in the non-plenary workshops will be restricted so as to facilitate informal discussion. Registration for workshops will be on a first come basis. The convenors for each workshop are indicated in the programme, but discussion will be open to all those participating

UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE
Jesus College, Cambridge and the University of Cambridge
Jesus College was founded as a college, within the University of Cambridge, in 1496 by Bishop Alcock of Ely. The history of the College is, however, rather more ancient. An order of nuns occupied the site and buildings for at least two hundred and fifty years before this. Since the inception of the annual Cambridge Symposium, thirty-three years ago by Professor Barry Rider, the Master and Fellows of the College have been pleased to host the event and the College administers all financial matters pertaining to the programme.

The earliest record of the University of Cambridge is in 1209 so the University has recently celebrated its 800th anniversary. The University, consisting of over 100 departments, faculties and schools, is rated as the world’s foremost research university. A number of the University’s centres and programmes are involved in supporting the annual Cambridge Symposium on Economic Crime.
The Centre for International Documentation on Economic and Organised Crime (CIDOEC)

CIDOEC was established as a non-profit making organisation and network in 1988 to promote collaborative and comparative research in the prevention and control of organised and economic crime. It is based in Cambridge, although it has branches in southern Africa, North America, Latin America and the Far East. The Chairman of CIDOEC's Advisory Board is Mr Saul M Froomkin QC, OBE, a former Attorney General of Bermuda.

The Institute of Advanced Legal Studies and the Society for Advanced Legal Studies

The IALS was established in 1947 and is a constituent member of the School for Advanced Study of the University of London. Although part of the University of London, the Institute's role is national, and is funded by government on this basis. Its library is the national law library and the Institute's research staff are concerned with promoting and conducting research across a broad spectrum of legal and related issues.

National Crime Agency

The NCA leads, supports and co-ordinates the response against serious and organised crime affecting the UK with a national and international reach and the mandate and powers to work in partnership with other law enforcement organisations. It incorporates a number of commands including the Economic Crime Command and the National Cyber Crime Unit. The commands are supported by a central Intelligence Hub. The Economic Crime Command is tasked with leading and co-ordinating the response to economic crime affecting the U.K., including amongst others: fraud; cyber-enabled fraud; bribery and corruption; intellectual property crime and market abuse

City of London Police

The City of London’s Police are entrusted as the National Lead Force for fraud on behalf of the UK Police Service. They lead the police service fight against fraud and economic crime.

The Serious Fraud Office of England, Wales and Northern Ireland

The Serious Fraud Office is an independent government department, operating under the superintendence of the Attorney General. Its purpose is to protect society by investigating and, if appropriate, prosecuting those who commit serious or complex fraud, bribery and corruption and pursuing them and others for the proceeds of their crime. Its Director is David Green CB QC.
