Adam Graycar is Professor Emeritus of Public Policy at the University of Adelaide (Australia). He has had careers in both academia and government (22 years in various senior level posts in Australia at both Federal and State level) including 4 years as head of the Cabinet Office, government of South Australia and 9 years as Director of the Australian Institute of Criminology.

He has worked in universities in Australia, Europe, USA and Asia. While Professor at the Australian National University he was the founder of the Transnational Research Institute on Corruption. He also works extensively and globally with various agencies and has taught regularly at the International Anti-Corruption Academy (IACA).

He has two doctorates from the University of New South Wales, is the author of some 300 scholarly publications. His latest book is Handbook on Corruption, Ethics and Integrity in Public Administration.